A Horse and Chair

KEPT TO HIRE, BY ALEXANDER PERRY.

August 1.

The Columbian Mirror
AND ALEXANDRIA GAZETTE.

NEW-YORK, OCTOBER 16.

Translated for the Daily Advertiser.

HAGUE, AUGUST 24.

The following summons was sent by admiral Duncan, to the Dutch admiral Story.

On board his Britannic majesty's ship Kent, August 20.

SIR,

Upwards of 2000 troops are already landed at the Helder, where more are disembarking; you will, I hope, not lose this favorable opportunity of manifesting your zeal and loyalty towards the prince of Orange, your lawful sovereign. I doubt not but you will, with all the vessels of the navy of Holland, which speedily will follow your example, declare in his favor. All those who are so inclined, will b considered as friends and allies and may hoist the flag of Holland.

Sir Ralph Abercrombie, who commands the British land forces, and Andrew Mitchel who next to me commands the fleet, are notified of these my propositions made to you, all the vessels therefore which chose to profit thereby, may safely come to join me; they shall be treated with the sincerest friendship as allies, and may remain with the utmost safety in the midst of the British fleet, until they may receive the immediate orders from the prince of Orange, who will order their future operations.

I have the honor to be, with respect and friendship,

DUNCAN.

ADMIRAL STORY'S ANSWER.

On board the Washington, in the Texel, August 27, fifth year of Batavian liberty.

ADMIRAL!

Was I to accept, as an officer, the offers you make, I should think myself unworthy the esteem of my lord Duncan, as well as that of every honest man; I know the duties I owe to my country and to the flag under which I have the honor to serve Should your force swell to double the number, my sentiments will still remain the same, you may therefore my lord, expect such a defence from me, as shall be honorable to my nation and myself.

I have sent your summons to my government, waiting for further instructions, which as soon as I receive them, shall be communicated to you.

Rest assured, my lord, that I am, with esteem

STORY.

The legislative body approved of admiral Story's answer; The following address was sent to the admiral to transmit to lord Duncan:

The landing of 2,000 troops at the Helder, as expressed in the summons, wants confirmation, as the best measures for preventing such a landing have been adopted, but admitting it as a fact, the brave commanders of our vessels would certainly be found rather to protect to the last extremity, the honor of the Batavian flag than to go over to an enemy. This added to admiral Story's answer, would have been tho't sufficient, if we were not forced to notify to lord Duncan, the unwarrantable conduct of the officer who was charged with the delivery of the summons, trusting that such conduct will not alone be disapproved, but also, severely punished by his nation.—The said officer handed to a Batavian officer, papers, containing a proclamation both in English and Dutch, tending to induce if possible the Batavians to revolt, and annul the constituted authorities. This daring fact was not discovered until after the departure of the British officer, who otherwise as hereafter it will be lawful and just, would have been treated as a revolter and traitor; for the future any officer charged with a delivery of a summons, or such like negociation sent by the British commander, shall be treated as a prisoner of war.

The president in the first chamber declared solemnly his acquiesence as to the manly answer sent by admiral Story to that of the English admiral, he praised the energy and section of the directory, who for the preservation of the present order of things, strain every nerve, lay even are ready to sacrifice life itself. He expatiated much upon the bravery of the Batavians, which was to oppose the army and fleet, he reminded them of the heroic acts of Trump and Ruyter.

PARIS, AUGUST 16.

The combined fleets are now in the roads of Brest. The English, say one of our prints, little thought such would be the result of our expedition to the Mediterranean. They expected a plan widely different, and had adopted measures in consequence. The combined squadrons will soon sail again from Brest.—Vice admiral Lacrosse is returned once more from Spain to Paris.

Two officers have arrived here from our northern coast, with intelligence that an English fleet of more than 100 sail had been descried. Nothing further has, however, been heard of it, and it is supposed to be the English expedition destined against Holland.

According to accounts from Cadiz, the crews of our fleet were paid every decade, and admiral Bruix on his arrival there had three millions left on board his ship.

VIENNA, AUGUST 21.

General Suwarrow, it is said, wishes that gen. Kray might remain in Italy, and that Melas might be appointed to the command in Switzerland.

By letters from Naples it appears, that cardinal Ruffo, in the name of the king, has commanded all Neapolitan officers who are scattered over Italy, to return on or before the first day of August.

ITALY, AUGUST 15.

The grand army of the allies receives daily a formidable increase; the besieging corps of Mantua is at a great distance, 200 pieces of artillery with an innumerable number of ammunition waggons, follow that corps.

Three thousand Neapolitan troops will be added to the grand army, as soon as the south and lower Italy is cleared of the French.

A new Russian army of 60,000 men is collecting on the frontiers of Gallicia, 40,000 of whom are to march to the Rhine and the rest to Italy. Five thousand Russians will follow them every month, that the armies may always be complete.

The Austrian princes and states of Silesia have granted the emperor a voluntary war contribution of 100,059 florins.

From London papers to September 4, received at the office of the Daily Advertiser.

RUSSIA.

STATE PAPER.

Declaration of war of the Emperor of all the Russias, against Spain.

We, by the grace of God, Paul I. &c. &c. do herewith make known to all our faithful subjects, that we & our allies have resolved to overthrow the lawless government now ruling France, and we have therefore risen against it with all our forces. The Almighty has blessed our arms to this very day, and crowned all our enterprizes with victory and success. Among the small number of European powers apparently attached to the French government, but in fact, powers that are only afraid of the vengeance of this government, the out cast of God, struggling with the last agonies of dissolution, Spain has, more than all the rest, shewn her fear of, or attachment to France, not by giving her actual succors, but by armaments. In vain have we made use of all our resources to open to that power the real path to honor and glory, by combining with us: she has persisted obdurately in the measures and wanderings destructive of herself: and thus have we at last found ourselves under the necessity of sending back her charge d'Affairs at our court, Ouiz. But having since that received information, that our own charge d'affairs too, counsellor Butzow, has been compelled to quit the king of Spain's dominions within a term unto him limited, we deem this an insult, committed upon our imperial dignity, and do hereby declare war; giving orders at the same time, to impose sequestration on all Spanish ships in our harbors, and to confiscate the same, and to send orders to the commanders of all our land and sea forces, to act with hostility every where against all the subjects of the king of Spain.

Done at Petersburg, July 26, 1799, in the year of our reign.

(Signed) PAUL.

PETERSBURG, AUGUST 2.

The Court Gazette contains a letter from Gen. the Pacha, dated 30th Siegilsha (May 29th;—) Buonaparte thought, on his arrival at Jaffa, to intrench himself there, and ordered the corps of Gaza, Acana, Ancia, to join him. He also began to draw ditches, and to erect batteries; but as soon as he learned that troops were sent out to cut off his retreat, for which the necessary orders had been dispatched to the Arabs, he feared to be totally lost at Jaffa; thus supposing that it would be impossible for him any longer to result, he took his flight from thence to Gaza on the 26th. One corps was immediately ordered in pursuit, and another took possession of Jaffa, where I opened a musselim.

On the flight to Jaffa, the enemy has given proofs of his savageness, by destroying all works and setting the town on fire in several places. His own batteries and intrenchments however remained.—With assistance of the most high, those outcasts of infidels have been completely defeated, and their total destruction is now unavoidable.' On the 2d, the Sublime Porte received by a Tartane from Ghezzar Pacha, news, that during the 56 days of the siege of Acre, there had not been a day without hard fighting, which reduced the Turkish force so far as to be very near surrendering, if they had not received a timely reinforcement from Rhodes of 6000 men, under command of Hassen Bey. Ghezzar Pacha profited by this lucky moment, paid every man of his corps in full, and ordered them to be prepared for the next day, the 10th of May, when he made such a sortie, which the French could not resist, but took to flight, after having burnt every thing they could not carry off. The cavalry was sent in pursuit, which killed a number of Frenchmen. According to the allegation of prisoners, Buonaparte received several wounds, and only reached Jaffa with the utmost difficulty. The Pacha also advises, that the tribe of Arabs, called Urban, has risen against Buonaparte, and joined the Pacha, against the common enemy, Buonaparte has been twice wounded in Syria.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 3.

Downing street, Sept. 2.

A dispatch, of which the following is a copy was this day received by the right honourable Henry Dundas, one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, from lieutenant general Sir Ralph Abercrombie, K. B.

Helder August 28.

SIR,

From the first day after our departure from England, we experienced such a series of bad weather, as is very uncommon at this season of the year. The ardour of admiral Mitchell for the service in which we were engaged, left it only with me to follow his example of zeal and perseverance, in which I was encouraged by the manner that he kept a numerous convoy collected. It was our determination not to depart from the resolution of attacking the Helder unless we should have been prevented by the want of water and provisions. On the forenoon of the 21st, the weather proved so favourable that we stood in upon the Dutch coast, and had made every preparation to land on the 22nd, when we were forced to sea by a heavy gale of wind. It was not until the the evening of the 25th that the weather began once more to clear up. On the 26th, we came to anchor near the shore of Helder, and on the 27th, in the morning, the troops began to disembark at day light. Although the enemy did not oppose our landing, yet the first division had scarcely began to move forward, before they got into action, which continued from five in the morning until three o'clock in the afternoon. The enemy had assembled a very considerable body of infantry, Cavalry and artillery, near Callantsoog, and made repeated attacks on our right with fresh troops. Our position was on a ridge of Sand Hills, stretching along the coast from North to South. Our right wing was unavoidably exposed to the whole force of the enemy. We had no where sufficient ground on our right to form more than a battalion in line; yet, on the whole, the position, though irregular, was not in our situation disadvantageous, having neither cavalry nor artillery. By the courage and perseverance of the troops, the enemy was fairly worn out and obliged to retire in the evening to a position two leagues in his rear. We have to regret many valuable officers lost to the service, who have either fallen or been disabled by their wounds. The corps principally engaged were the reserve under the command of Colonel Macdonald, consisting of the 23d and 55th regiments. The regiments of Major General Coote's brigade, which have been much fatigued, were the Queen's, the 27th, 29th, and 85th regiments. Major General Oyley's brigade was brought in to action towards the close of the day, and has sustained some loss. As the enemy still held the Helder with a garrison of near 2000 men, it was determined to attack it before day break on the morning of the 28th, and the Brigade under Major General Moore, supported by Major General Burrard's, were destined for this service; but about eight o'clock yesterday evening, the Dutch fleet in the Mars Diep got under weigh, and the garrison was withdrawn, taking their route through the marshes towards Medemblick having previously spiked the guns on the batteries, and destroyed some of the cartridges. About nine at night Major General Moore, with the second battalion of Royals, and the 92d Regiment, under the command of Lord Huntley, took possession of this important post, in which he found a numerous artillery of the best kind, both of heavy and field train.

All that part of the Dutch fleet in the Nieuve Diep, together with their naval magazine at Nieuve Werk, fell into our hands this morning; a full detail of which it is not in my power to send. This day we have the satisfaction to see the British flag flying in the Mars Diep, and part of the 5000 men under the command of Major General Dyn, disembarking under the batteries of the Helder. During the course of the action, I had the misfortune to lose the service of Lieutenant General Sir James Pulteney, from a wound he received in his arm, not before he had done himself the greatest honour, and I was fully sensible of the loss of him. Major General Coote supplied his place with ability, Colonel Macdonald, who commanded the reserve, and who was very much engaged during the course of the day, though wounded, did not quit the field. Lieutenant Colonel Maitland, returning to England, to go on another service, and Major Kempt, my Aid de Camp and bearer of this letter, whom I beg leave to recommend to your notice and protection, will be able to give any further information which may be required.

A list of the killed and wounded, as far as we have been able to ascertain it, accompanies this letter.

(Signed) RALPH ABERCROMBIE.

To the Right hon. HENRY DUNDAS, &c. &c. &c.

Head quarters, Klein Keeten, August 28, 1799.

RODEZ, AUGUST 26.

A letter dated Lech, the 19th instant, and signed Guyot, states, that a memorable victory was gained over the archduke, on this side of the lake of Zurich, on the 25th. The Austrian army is reported to have lost 13,000 men. If this account was true, Massena's dispatches of the 21st, would have mentioned it.

A letter from Massena, dated August 21, contains the following result of the late affairs; "The attak of Mount St. Gothard has perfectly succeeded; the enemy have lost 21 pieces of cannon; we have made 8,400 prisoners. (Official article.)

PLYMOUTH, SEPTEMBER 2.

This morning passed by the Sound to the westward, the channel fleet, under the command of lord Bridport, consisting of 35 sail of the line, and five frigates; the outward bound Lisbon and West India fleets passed by at the same time.

The Namur, of 90 guns, and the Edgar, of 74 guns, are gone up Hamoaze, to refit.

YARMOUTH, SEPTEMBER 3.

Half past three this afternoon his majesty's ship Kent, admiral lord Duncan, and the Russian admiral, came to an anchor in our roads. The beach was lined with spectators to congratulate the noble admiral on his landing; but his lordship being confined by illness, the spectators were prevented from testifying their loyalty, as they wished.

Lady Duncan has gone on board the Kent to attend on his lordship in his present indisposition, which it is hoped will not long continue.

The auxiliary Russians are said to have arrived at Schaffhausen, destined for Switzerland. They are said to be 36,000 men in number.

Massena writes, that in taking Mount St. Gothard, 8000 prisoners were made.

BERN, August 17. Massena on the 15th repulsed the Austrians into Zurich. Lecourbe is said to have cut off a body of 7000 Austro-Russians. The fighting continues.

FRANCE INTERNALLY.

The intestine troubles of France have greatly increased.

August 18, the directory, by message to the council of 500, proposed to proclaim 26 cantons in the west in rebellion.—They exhort the council to a hearty and immediate co-operation as the only means of saving the republic. Royalty growing more and more audacious. They denounced the licentiousness of the press.

August 18, a petition was presented complaining that Sieyes was incompetent as a director. This was disapproved, and passed over.

August 21, Lucian Bonaparte proposed forming a new army to defend the frontiers, and another to suppress internal troubles.

August 23, 18 millions were voted for the marine, in addition to 125 before granted.—A committee was appointed to prevent unfounded denunciations.

August 25, a letter was read in the council of elders, stating, that 4,000 rebels had been defeated in ci devant St. Gedens, 2,000 killed, 1,000 taken prisoners.

Domiciliary visits are nightly paid.

During the domiciliary visits, at Paris, in the night of August 6, nine hundred persons were arrested.

Three Police officers were killed at Paris, August 23, and one wounded.

Insurrection in the department of the Haut Garonne, is the most decisive. There are 16,000 men under arms, with the white cockade. The late republican gen. Lancey has been arrested; he avows himself now a counter-revolutionist, and implicates the commandant of Bayonne, and Jean Pie de Port.

The disaffection of the multitude to the existing government of France has prematurely shewn itself in Bordeaux, as well as in other places. We have intelligence through various mediums, that on the 6th August, numerous inflammatory bills were posted about different parts of the city; in consequence of which several persons were shortly after taken up, whom the people attempted to rescue, when a conflict ensued, in which 20 were killed, and a considerable number wounded.

It is said, that at the feast of the 10th of August, several balls were fired at Sieyes and Barras.

The French directory has shut up the jacobin club.

The three first articles of accusation against the ex directors were negatived in the council of five hundred, August 16.

General Brune, lately in Holland, replaces Bernadotte, as war minister.

THE FLEETS

Remain at Brest, under sailing orders. The admirals were expected at Paris to consult the directory, relative to their future governments.

The St. Ann, of 112 guns, lately stated to have got on shore near Cadiz, is now said to be totally lost.

SALEM, OCTOBER 11.

The schooner Betsy, capt. Brown, of this port, bound to Cape Francois, was taken on the 12th September, in lat. 23, 30, long. 66, by the French privateer l'Ardent, of 12 guns, belonging to Guadaloupe, and commanded by captain Lapee. The mate and three men were taken on board the privateer, and put in irons. The next day she took an English and two American vessels; one was captain Boardman, of Portsmouth, and another a sloop bound to Wilmington.—On the 14th they took a vessel belonging to Portsmouth, which being in ballast, the Americans were put on board her to come home. After they left the privateer, they saw her in chase of an American schooner and sloop. This privateer was the same which met with such a drubbing from the London Packet, of Baltimore; and Mr. Acher, the mate of the Betsy, informs us, that when he was on board, the blood still remained on the decks; he could not learn how many were killed, but there were nearly 20 wounded then on board.

PHILADELPHIA, OCTOBER 16.

John Fries.—The trial of this gentleman came on before the circuit court of the United States, at Norristown, yesterday.

Wm. Duane.—The trial of this gentleman has been postponed.

Translations from Hamburg papers to the 10th September received at the office of the Philadelphia Gazette.

HAGUE, SEPTEMBER 3.

All the members of our government were yesterday greatly surprised at an account, which certainly was to be expected in a short time, to wit, that our whole fleet in the Zuyder sea, consisting of 9 ships of the line, 4 frigates, and some cutters, surrendered to the English without firing a gun. Already on the 21st of August, all the buoys had been removed out of the channel, and it was therefore hoped that the Britin would not venture to enter the Texel, but they did it nevertheless, and the British admiral Mitchel demanded a surrender; which admiral Dir-ky answered scornfully, but without effect, because the greatest part of the crews refusing to fight, and great riots breaking out on board of the fleet, he was obliged to surrender the same. The former flag of our marine was then hoisted on board the ships thus surrendered, and the English flag flies along side of it. By this acquisition the English are masters of the whole Zuyder sea, and can appear before Amsterdam whenever they please; all that is left us now, are a few ships in the Meuse and at Vlietsingen. Mean while, our courage does not fail us yet, and we hope every thing from general Brune, and the troops under his command.

As for our troops, nothing material has as yet happened between them and the English, since the landing of the latter, these being busily employed to entrench themselves at the Helder, in order to maintain this important position, whereby they are masters of the Zuyder sea, and the borders thereof. Our troops wait for the reinforcements of the French troops, who join them from all parts. During this time the troops, who were on the other side of the Yssel have been ordered home, and are to be embarked for North Holland. General Daendels had taken, on the 30th of August, a position from Alkmaar to Schermernorn, for the purpose of facilitating the junction of these troops. The day before yesterday he changed this position again somewhat further back, yet in such a manner, that his centre remains at Schermerhorn, his right wing is near Purmerend, and his left on the North Sea, because this passage had been left open, and the British had actually advanced the day before as far as Medenblick, and great apprehensions were entertained for Enkhuysen. The day before yesterday early, general Brune went away from hence, in order to take the chief command of all our troops, which amount, as it is said, already to upwards of 30,000 men.

Though nothing has happened between the troops since the 27th of August, yet we have seen some things which seems to indicate some important communications between our government and the English. General Daendels informed yesterday that general Abercrombie had demanded of him an escort to send an English general officer to the Hague, with dispatches, which he had received from his government. General Daendels demanded instructions how to act. A committee was thereupon sent to him consisting of the director Van Hoft and four representatives out of the two chambers, who went in three carriages, to his head-quarters. But the intention in sending this committee is, according to a notification of the legislative body, to make known to the troops, that they are determined to defend themselves to the utmost, and that the French republic demands the same; who by a letter which an extraordinary courier brought yesterday, gave our directory the assurance that all the French troops were at their disposal, and as the greatest part of their reinforcements is already arrived, we expect to-morrow a decisive battle.

The directory have appointed citizens Feron, Fanshet and Adet, commissioners at St. Domingo; Jeannet, Barot and gen. Laveaux, at Guadaloupe; and Victor Hugues at Cayenne.

☞ NOTICE.

SOME young men who would wish to be thought Bucks, Bloods, or Rakes, did, on Saturday night last, commit several acts, which, in the opinion of every reasonable man will stamp them as blackguards. They removed the steps from the doors of a number of houses in several streets, not considering the injurious consequences which might have occured had sickness, fire, or any other casualty made it necessary for any of the family to go out in a dark night.

The subscriber thinking himself in a particular manner interested, the Council having thought proper to appoint him superintendant of the night watch, takes this method of informing those who have been or may in future be guilty of such conduct, so contrary to GOOD ORDER and the police of the town, that he will use every method to apprehend them, and if found to the act, that he will lodge them in gaol, until they can be examined by a magistrate in the morning, and dealt with as the law directs—let such characters or connexions be what they may.

The public's obedient servant,

JAMES CAMPBELL.
